

I support the decision of the FCC to hold wireless telephone companies to comply and allow consumers to move between wireless companies using the same phone number. I have heard no rational from the wireless companies to support their stance on requiring new customers to have new numbers. Their only consideration seems to be their profit and customer service does not factor into their thinking. Since the FCC has made this decision, and has already postponed enforcement once, it should require the companies to comply at this time.